It was a sunny day, so Brinlee and I drove to the shore. When we got there, we went to the beach. The sand was hot, but the breeze was nice. We dug a hole deep in the sand for the sunshade.

We saw a big team of seagulls on the sand and rocks. I said, "They see us, too, Brinlee."

I had a bag of sweet peanuts with me as a treat. I began to think that the seagulls would like to have some peanuts. The one seagull on the rock saw the peanuts and ran over to us. He made it clear that he wanted a peanut! Then, they all began to run to us.

I was a bit timid to give them some at first, but I gave the seagulls the peanuts to eat. They made a mess. They ate the peanuts but left the shells on the beach.

The tide came up to where the peanut shells were left by the seagulls. Just then, a big wave crashed on the shells and washed them out to sea. The waves cleaned all of the shells off the beach. At least the beach was clean.

The gulls wanted peanuts, but I had given them all from the bag. I had to sneak to the trash can to get rid of the peanut bag.

It was time to go home. I needed tea, and Brinlee needed coffee. We left for the drive back home. What a fun day at the beach!
